EVERGREENS ARE EVER BEAUTIFUL

In choosing your evergreen, bear always in mind that some varieties, such as the hemlocks, certain spruces, the Red Pine, etc., thrive well on moist soils; while others, such as the Junipers and White Pine, prefer the dry, well-drained situation. Some species are particularly responsive to shearing, and thus are most valuable for hedges and formal effects; others are not susceptible to damage from strong winds and make a very desirable windbreak.

There is no more artistic solution for the discord in your landscape than to SCREEN it out by a border of carefully selected and grouped evergreens; they not only hide the unsightly object the year round but are also very decorative.

Where space is limited, it may be necessary to confine this screen to a single row, and, at times, to hold even this in check by constant clipping to form a HEDGE. Great care should be exercised in selecting a species for this use since not all evergreens bear the shears well and endure severe winds.

FOUNDATION PLANTING, the most common use of evergreens, calls for utmost care in the selection and arrangement of varieties. Too many plantings of this sort have defeated their own end. Some by enormous "overdoes" of strong-growing material, which quickly moved the house far back into the jungle; others have resulted in the opposite, stingly extreme. The former condition is more commonly found since too many landscape and nursery men allow their avidity to sell dominate whatever of judgment they may possess in the matter.

Dwarf varieties grow slowly. Use these not so sparingly as to produce a scattered effect, nor so profusely that each will almost immediately begin to struggle with its neighbor.

What about the ENTRANCE or GATEWAY? Bank it with Evergreens. Here you may use larger sizes and stronger growers for your space is not so restricted. Your enjoyment will be immediate.

Use SPECIMENS sparingly. No planting has greater influence in your landscape either to add to, or to detract from, its charm. Specimens should complete the Picture which their unwise use so often mars.

BUT THERE IS OTHER LANDSCAPE MATERIAL useful for shade and beauty and fruit. How cool the shade of the maple which shields you from the blazing sun at mid-day! How comforting the protection of the lofty elm that canopies your dwelling! These with oaks, lindens, etc., selected and located to suit your taste and need are a very essential element in all landscape effects.

What countless artists have tried in vain to vie with Jack-Frost—the King of all artists—in his production of myriads, harmonious shades on oak, and maple and dogwood? And how dull and flat would be the autumn without them! By all means plant them.

"Handsome is as handsome does" complain our FRUIT TREES when they are not included in your plan for beautifying your grounds. Just because a tree yields you an abundant crop of delicious fruit as the good measure augmenting its wealth of shade and profusion of fragrant blossoms is no reason for considering it as belonging to the "working class" amongst trees.

Whatever the size of your grounds you can plant a Cherry, Plum, Peach, or Apple; in the damp soil by your spring, plant a Quince. Along the garden border, or over the back walk—build a trellis for some of our delicious grapes.

ALL THESE GROW AT ROSEDALE

Remember this. Whatever the plant, wherever the location, the keynote is beauty, and in all Nature the Impression of Beauty is created by the appearance of Appropriateness. If you are in doubt consult us. It is a very important part of our business.
The ROSE—The QUEEN of the GARDEN

And sight regally does she dominate her subjects. Shall I have a Garden for me Roses or Roses for my Garden? asks each who knows its charm.

Has any one ever heard of a garden so lovely as to be unable to boast a rose? Was the dweller too poor to buy our Hybrid Teas?—then crept in the humble and sweetly scented wild rose to assume the lost.

Has any one ever heard of a mansion so stately that it could boast too many roses? Roses to compete with the blushing bride; Roses for the sick room; Roses in Tune with the fatalistic and Roses in equal harmony with the intoxicating rhythm of the ballroom; Roses for the sweet girl graduate and the opera star. Roses—always appropriate.

HYBRID TEAS for your formal garden, your border and your greenhouse; CLIMBING ROSES for your trellis or screen or pergola; RUGOSA ROSES for your hedge; and with renewed popularity returns to us the rose-bowl of our grand- mother to prove that we are determined to ring to the frigate long after the beauty of odor and form has fled.

By all means, have Roses for your Garden even if you cannot have a Garden for your Roses. By all means have ROSEDALE ROSES.

ROSEDALE FLOWERING SHRUBS

Countless home builders whose space is too limited to indulge their love for the beauty and vigour of our large stand shrubs are creating the Home Beautiful by the use of flowering shrubs. These never become large enough to mar the restricted landscape view, while in large plantings they provide the compensation that lowers the eye from the beauty and greatness of the trees that frame in your landscape to the vista of home and garden.

Should you want a shrub to furnish you a prodiglise bloom of white in July and August, and yet not get so large as to spoil the proportion of your landscape, plant Spiraea opulifolia. Similarly, from a comprehensive table prepared in our catalog you may choose any height, in any color for any season from the April Forsythias to the October Altheas.

ROSEDALE carries a stock of Flowering Shrubs in large sizes which, because they have been frequently transplanted, can be moved as safely as the smaller sizes. These will give you immediate effect—we have done the waiting for you.

Last, but not least, let us remember that a goodly supply of flowering shrubs does not make any serious inroad upon the home budget. They are inexpensive luxuries—a fifty cent pur- chase rapidly develops into a ten dollar value.

Limitations in neither time nor space nor cost can prevent you Home Builder from creat- ing the garden of CHOICE PERENNIALS. Its profusion of blooms will provide cut flowers for every occasion without impairing its genera- tive supply. The crowning glory of such a garden lies in the fact that, prosperously planned, it will give you in the early days the growing season with new and beautiful blooms which have been in boiling since yesterday.

Whether in the sun or shade, you can clothe that spot of naked soil with beau- tiful foliage and bloom. Let us part in your garden the idle. If you don't plant what you want, nature will plant what you may not like.
